

Palm Springs Art Museum offers John Baldessari Exhibition

John Baldessari: A Print Retrospective from the Collections of Jordan Schnitzer & His Family Foundation

February 26 – June 26, 2011

February 9, 2011 (Palm Springs, CA) -- The Palm Springs Art Museum will open a new exhibition called John Baldessari: A Print Retrospective from the Collections of Jordan D. Schnitzer and his family foundation and will run from February 26, 2011 – June 26, 2011.

For more than 40 years, John Baldessari has been a mainstay of the Southern California art scene and a key contributor to national and international explorations of conceptual art in its many idioms, whether linguistic, performance-based, or photo and object-based. An underlying theme in his art has been the questioning of perceptual experience – how we see, interpret, and understand the world around us – and how this experience can dislocate preconceived notions and challenge conventional thinking.

His work has been aggressively multimedia, ranging from pure painting to printed and written word art, colorful collages and assemblages, recorded performances, and works that combine painting, photography, and sculpture. Baldessari's impressive achievements were recently honored by a traveling retrospective Pure Beauty, organized by the Tate Modern and the Los Angeles County Museum of Art and also traveling to the Museu d'Art Contemporani de Barcelona and the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

The hundreds of prints that Baldessari has made in a variety of media with workshops and publishers in California, New York, and Europe underscore the high value that he places on printmaking as an artistic form. More than 100 prints are included in this exhibition – from early prints of 1973 to his most recent ones of 2010—as testimony to his longstanding and dedicated commitment to printmaking.

Additional mixed media works and paintings by Baldessari on loan from other collectors will be installed in the Steve Chase Wing on the museum's upper level.

About John Baldessari

Born in National City, California in 1931, Baldessari has been teaching art and making art since the 1950s after receiving his BA and MA from San Diego State College. He taught at the California Institute of the Arts from its founding in 1970 to 1988 and has been visiting professor of art at the University of California, Los Angeles, since 1996. He lives in Los Angeles and is often credited with helping to make that city an internationally recognized center of contemporary art.

In 1970, Baldessari abandoned painting to work exclusively with photographs and text to make his art more accessible. He also hoped to bring photography into the mainstream of contemporary art and to promote it as a legitimate artistic tool. Baldessari's interest in stretching art world parameters to include photographs coincided in the 1970s with an interest on the part of many progressive American print workshops to introduce printmaking processes as vehicles for contemporary expression.

Baldessari looked first to Southern California print workshops that were already well known for their receptivity to artists stretching the limits of printmaking. During the 1980s, he continued to employ photographs, particularly B-movie stills, that he shaped, altered, framed, and rearranged, with and without text, to trigger new meanings.

In the mid-1990s, Baldessari began working with the Mixografia® workshop in Los Angeles to create three-dimensional prints utilizing their unique process of printing with metal molds. This interest in dimensionality carried over to recent editions from Gemini G.E.L. in which screen printed images are constructed in layers.
